Or perhaps he might better be compared to a rope dancer. The facility with which he performs the most astenishing tricks, cannot be enough admired. The twistings, the turnings, the careful halancing of such a man, furnishes a complete likeness to Doorana's political course. We cannot but marvel at the dexterity he exhibits in shifting his position in the most perilous places. We wonder that he does not full off, as he sways from one side to the other. He access to enough proceeds. He will even turn somersaults for our ciffication. But his eye is fixed constantly apon a single spot, and he is confident of his safety. He may be mistaken; no man is posi-tively sure of making me hales step. His con-sistent inconsistencies may amuse us for a while; but they can scarcely command our confidence. Some credulous persons may con-sider Dounts as a saint; but few sensible men-will be inclined to have their faith upon the will be inclined to hang their faith upon the Author of the Nebracka Bill, and the Champion of the Dred-Scott Decision.

The anniversary meeting of the American Tract Society is held in New York this week. The most important subject to come before it is the conduct of the Publishing Committee, who last year received positive instructions to do certain things, and, after accepting the trust, did exactly the opposite. Under ordinary cirtumacious gentlemen out of effice and electing persons who do not assume to be wiser or bet-ter than their constituency. But the circumvery—generously presuming that it oral side. The specie hughear appears to be getting quite tame. People can actually have gold to carry in their pockets, by paying three-fourths or one per cent. perminn for it, over the besses of Illinois and Wisconsin hanks. At this ridiculous shave of course nobody wants gold, and it is even likely that persecuted metal will run down to the level of our first class bank paper. Under the existing order of things we have ladeed no security against another scuffle between Under the existing order of things we have indeed no security against another sculle between the shisplasters and the mint drops, which would inevitably result in the disconsiture of the former, but for the present we are trading within three-fourths of one per cent. of the world's standard of exchanges. The iarmer sells his produce for 991 cents on the dollar.
The merchant collects his accountrat the same
whether he handles a gold dollar twice a year or not, but the net result is the same as if everybody ran off to a broker and got his funds

Docuras, like sare, has spent his life in persecuting the true church; he has haled men and women; he has breathed out threatenings and shaughter against the disciples. When the Lecompton Bill was presented, there showe round about him a light; he seemed to hear a voice which warred him back; he seemed to feel that it was hard to kick against the priche. Many trusted that it would prove a hopeful conversion. A few were disposed to canonies him immediately. But the majority thought that it admitted annug the members, of the true faith, he should be admitted only on probation. We save obliged to confess that their fears were well founded. Mr. Provident and Follow-Citizens:
On the morning of the 14th of March, two Roman Patricks, Oratin and Pierri, were guillottned in Paris, for attempting to rid the world of the greatest despot of the Ninetcenth Century—Louis Napoleon, better known as Napoleon the Little. The norsing was cloudy and cold, still thousands of ecopie were cut, not so much to witness the horriste tragedy, as to units in expressing their avenue.

patriot heart throughout the world. Yes, thou syrants kill the body, they cannot kill the spirit, which lives through all time. Not satisfied with the blood of these patriots, he endeavored to cruthe public opinion of England. His old fellor rogue, Palmer.son, who has always represented the profound satuate diplomacy, was turned out of office, to the general satisfaction of the people. He nestigated the aristocratory of England to commence as action against Dr. Bernard and after much sealing in old rotten archives of old English less hey brought them to total.

This makes out the full number of Senators, duly qualified previous to the sham election of Fircu and Baraur, to be fifty, instead of forty seven. Dr. Firou counted them, and positively said, on his honor, that forty-seven was the true number of the said of the

This is one of the hinges, and the chief one of the controversy. The effect of Gov. Willard's testimony cannot easily be evaded. He was the presiding officer of the Schake at the time, corroborate that of the Senator.

On Friday Gov. Willard was again put upon the stand, and nothing new was developed relative to the organization of the Indiana Senate. In answer to questions about the customs and regulations governing joint conventions in legislative bodies, he exhibited actonishing ignorance. He knew nothing about such things at all. He was as "innocent of inowiedge," as a babe is of mental crience. We venture to say, however, that if any one had told the Governor that he knew nothing about the course pursued by "joint gowen-Gottschalk.—Recent letters from South America, speak of the new triumphs of this distinguished American artist—If anything may be called a triumph, gathered on the rank soil of a semi-savage land. It is probable that Mr. Gottschalk will return to us a richer and a wiser man. The best fruits of his journey reach us here in the shape of new compositions, from which we judge that he has been more than assually basy with his pen.—N. Y. Tenes.

Few persons are aware of the patience and labor exercised by the astronomer in making discoveries of this kind. It requires several years study and practice to quality one to discover a telescopic comet. It is undoubtedly easy to look at a comet already visible to the naked eye in the heavens; but when it is required to discover an unknown one, wandering in its "long travel of a thousand years" in the profound abyss of space, the labor then becomes truly prodigious. The amount of physical suffering occasioned by exposure to all tinds of temperature, the bending and twisting of the body when examining near the genith, and the constant strain of the eye, cannot be fully understood and appreciated by one unanqualated with an anstronomer's life.

The astronomer, with his telescope, begins ut the going down of the san, and examines, in sones, with the utmost care and vigilance, the starry wants, and continues till the "circling hours" bring the sun to the eastern horizon, when star and comet sade from his view. It requires several nights to complete a survey of the heavens; and o am these nights do not follow in succession, being interrupted by the full moon, by clouds, auroras, and by various other meteorological phenomena. He is frequently vexed by passing cloude; fleeting through the midnight sky, and strong and chilly breezes of the night. His labors are continued throughout the year, and his unwearied exertions do not elacken furing the long wintyn nights, when the frozen particles of snaw and tee, driven before the northern blast, cause the stars to sparkle with unusual lustre, and bis breath to Which will be Embroideries and Luces, LIFE THOUGHTS J. GIFT THOUGHTS GATHERED FROM Spripgs, DOWN PARIC PRICE geone consiellation in their "starry dance" around their appointed center. Occasionally the field of the telescope is filled with the dazzling radiance of unnumbered suns, of a variety of rich and beautiful colors. The field of the telescope is often illumined by the sudden transit of a far-off meteor, invisible to the maked eye. Sometimes a large one falls from the zenith, and silently exploding, fills the midnight sky with a startling spectral light. The solitude and silence of the night are broken, in spring, in summer, and autumn, by the low murmaring voices of migrating birds, and the half-suppressed buffeting of their weary wings, which darken for a moment the field of the telescope in their flight. These are the only living companions of the astronomer affoat in the sky at midnight.

There is a momentary excitement when his wearied eye detects a small wisp of pale soattered light in the field of his telescope. It is very comet-like, but he does not feel quite sure that he is not tantalized with a nebula—a cluster of suns—so remote as to defy the utmost power of assisted vision to resolve it into its individual components. He immediately ascortains the exact position, and examines the catalogues for information of its character. If it is unrecorded, he is obliged to bring the wondrous mechanism of human hands to his assistance. The siderest clock, and the minutely graduated circles of his telescope, inform him of his right ascension and declination. Usually the distance of the unknown body is rigorously measured by the micromster—a work of unsurpassed delicacy—from a star in the same field. At the end of several hours, his labors are rewarded by the discovery of a new onetals, or the slow but declaive motion of a new comet. It is a moment of intense feeling. A new globe has hove in sight from the numes found of human vision. Whither has it come? and whither is it going? What is it disfance from the earth and from the sun? When will it be nearest to the earth, and when to the sun? What are its velocity and cupation of the Island of Ferman, is looked upon as a violation of existing treaties, which the interests of Brance and Russis require them to resist with energy. In 1849, the learned world in America and Europe was astonished at the production of the eliptic elements of the first comet of that year, by the wonderful Safford, then only fourteen years of age. No mathematical genius in the history of our race has ever achieved such an honor at so carrly an age.

The late King of Deamark, a great pakron of astronomy, in the last years of his life, decreed that a gold medal should be awarded to the first discover of a comet. Miss Maria Mitchell, of Nantucket, discovered a comet in October, 1847, and received therefor a comet medal, and was further honored by being made a member of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences. The King soon after deceased, and his successor appropriated his revenues to other purposes. The discontinuance of the Denmark medal has not in the least degree abated the zeal of the astronomers. The discovery of the same comet by different astronomers in different parts of the werld, on the same night, or within a few days of each other, attests their unremitting vigilance, And Wharf Boat Proprietors, CORNICES. LOW PRICES FOR CASH, 79 South Clark Street, ACR CURTAINS AND TRIMMINGS BRASDRETH'S PILLS. HIPPING AGENTS OF THE ILLINON.
